IIT GANDHINAGAR

The tradition to invite to students from different states of India, and also students from different countries. They celebrate different festivals together, including Navratri. Homal (homal), a civil engineering student from Uttar Pradesh, shares his excitement, "I have always wanted to play garba and dance like this. This year, it's very special because some of my friends are also coming to watch the garba. I had to take a long drive to reach here, so that I can participate in garba celebrations."

Srujan Dasgupta, an MB student from Mumbai, shares, "Being an international student here has already given me great opportunities to explore India's beautiful culture and traditions. This is going to be my first Navratri and I am excited beyond words. I have spent many years reading and looking at pictures around the world, photos and dance forms as a way of remembering location and grammar. I am delighted about being a part of this festival in Ahmedabad and sharing the same joyful atmosphere with people whom I might not even know. But with them, I will become one while celebrating this beautiful festival."

MICA

For the students of MICA, the tradition is their home away from home.

IIM-A

Students come here from different parts of India, and world. Gargya Jais, a first-year student, says, "Being from Delhi, where community celebration of festivals is on the decline, I am really looking forward to celebrating a grand and colourful Navratri with the IIM-A community. I am ready to embrace myself completely and celebrate the festival the way the tradition is."
